

Topic: Family and Relationships

Claim about Huxley’s Perspective: In the novel, Huxley examines his fears regarding the future, and he believes that society may eradicate fundamental components of civilization, such as love and intimate relationships, to repress pain and suffering.

Textual Reference &amp; Page #	Explanation
“Family, monogamy, romance. Everywhere exclusiveness, a narrow channelling of impulse and energy.” “But every one belongs to every one else” (40).	<ul style="list-style-type: none"><li>* Ch. 3 DHC brings students outside (garden)</li><li>* WC (Mustafa) shows up— what life/the world used to be like; maybe telling students too much</li><li>* Relationships cause hardship; they exclude people and make them feel isolated, separated<ul style="list-style-type: none"><li>— everyone belongs to everyone eliminates pain (love too, though; what about the joys?)</li></ul></li><li>* Monogamy == restraint and control<ul style="list-style-type: none"><li>— wanting = suffering (eliminate this; everyone can fulfill every impulse and desire). They are like little kids (I want it now — Freud’s ID)</li></ul></li></ul>

