

MLA

So Exciting!

TITLE & NO AUTHOR

- Title & No Author: “Dancing Burglar: Teenage Criminal's Dance Moves Gave Him Away, Police Say”
- “Police in Galveston, Texas have been able to identify a possible burglary suspect thanks to security camera footage that captured the man busting out ‘signature’ dance moves” (“Dancing Burglar”).

PARAPHRASE

- “Police in New York City say thieves held up the owners of a pizzeria and then fled with a bag of full dough – the kind that crusts are made of” (“Men Hold Up”).
- Two men robbed a pizzeria and stole pizza dough (“Men Hold Up”).

QUOTED IN!!

“Woman in sumo wrestler suit assaulted her ex-girlfriend...after she waved at [a] man dressed as a Snickers bar” (qtd. in Luippold).

AUTHOR: MADISON

- “A customer at Applebee's, an American restaurant, handed a waitress her own stolen driver's license in an attempt to order alcohol” (Madison).

QUOTE VS. PARAPHRASE

- “When a man was accused of burglary, his lawyer tried to defend him in court by stating that he merely put his arm through a window and removed a few items, and you cannot punish an entire person for the work of one of his limbs” (Miller).
- A burglar went into a Bank of America and wrote a note to the teller about robbing the bank, but he didn’t give the teller the note, for he was afraid that someone saw him write the note. He went across the street to rob another bank and the teller told him his note was written on a Bank of America deposit slip, so he would have to return to the Bank of America. He did and the teller called the police (“Top 10 Stupidest Crimes”).

AUTHOR: CAULFIELD

PAGE # 35

- “Terry Trent, 44, was high on [bath salts] when he broke into a family’s home, put up some Christmas decorations, and then plopped down on a couch to watch television” (Caulfield 35).

RULES YOU NEED TO KNOW

- (Author's Last Name and Page Number)
 - (Krakauer 25).
- (Author's Last Name)
 - (Medred).
 - (Mason).
- (qtd. in Author's Last Name)
 - (qtd. in Krakauer 36).
 - (Krakauer Author's Note)